Alumni Are Now an "A"

Time management is a very popular topic today, and Alan Laekin is the expert among experts in this field. He recommends the prioritization of jobs by assigning them to either "A", "B", or "C" categories. The "C" category is really the wastebasket, the "B" category is what you do when you finish your "A's," and the "A's" are what you have decided are must do jobs.

In 1977 and 1978, Sigma Phi Epsilon placed its alumni program in the "A" category, and William L. Hoke, Jr., was appointed Alumni Affairs Director. Since then, the results have been very gratifying.

We now have a District Alumni Advisor in most of the Fraternity's 25 Districts, and we have a good start on placing Chapter Alumni Advisors in each of the 204 undergraduate chapters and providing them with the resources to upgrade chapter/alumni relations programs. Staffing at the chapter and District levels with concerned volunteers is the key to a successful alumni program. As alumni, you and I know we want to hear from our chapters first. This is the thrust of our alumni program, and you will be seeing the results on a personal level very soon.

The Fraternity Continues to Grow

During the 1977-1978 academic year, Sigma Phi Epsilon grew in number of chapters and number of new pledges and initiates, and the rate of growth was more than any year since 1969. In my opinion, this solidifies the trend of renewed interest in fraternities which we have been hearing about for the last three years. Last year, we added seven new chapters, including the rechartering of the Kentucky Beta Chapter at the University of Louisville, and we pledged 4,479 men compared to 4,368 the previous year and initiated 3,638 compared to 3,347 the previous year.

Of prime importance to many alumni is the fact that of our 19 colonies operating at the end of last year, six were at schools where we have dormant chapters. These are California Gamma Chapter at Santa Barbara, Michigan Epsilon at Michigan State, Minnesota Alpha at Minnesota, New York Epsilon at Buffalo, New York Gamma at NYU, and Pennsylvania Mu at Temple.

Alumni Support

Alumni support at the Chapter Counselor, Alumni Board, and District levels is increasing both in quantity and quality, and in the long run, this will be the major factor in our continuing quest for excellence in all undergraduate operations. Only through sound alumni counseling can our chapters remain strong.

Another key area of alumni support is financial. In 1977, alumni support of the Living Endowment Program reached $89,516, the highest level ever. This has to be tempered somewhat by the fact that the 1977 campaign actually lasted sixteen (16) months, since it was the last to be conducted on an academic year basis. The 1978 program has been underway for 10 months, and less than $60,000 has been contributed. This is disappointing and of great concern, chiefly because the number of alumni contributing is far less than in previous years. The annual giving program is being conducted by the Educational Foundation for the first time in our history which benefits the donor alumnus, since he can take a tax deduction for his contribution.

To assure that Sigma Phi Epsilon continues to meet its expectations and continues its successes, a balance between alumni support in volunteer positions and alumni support through the checkbook must be maintained. I feel the Foundation must increase participation in the annual giving program to more than double its present level. This means that 4,000 alumni who are not now annual contributors must join us, and our level of giving must reach $150,000 within the next 12 months.

Sigma Phi Epsilon is a people business, and it takes a significant commitment to staff at adequate levels, travel to where the Staff is needed, and to conduct chapter and leadership programs, so the undergraduates learn proper and necessary skills. We are doing all of this now, and we are doing it successfully. To continue in this time of rising costs will require the expanded support of the Fraternity's alumni.

The next time you receive my letter requesting your annual contribution, I know that you will understand its importance and the value of your investment in Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Minnesota Alumni Demonstrate Commitment; Re-establish Their Sig Ep Chapter!

By Deen L. Woodbeck
Regional Director

Picture yourself as a freshmen, back when you lived in the dormitory. Some guy with funny looking letters on his jacket knocks on your door and says, "Hey, want to start your own fraternity?" How would you react, especially if you've never had any contact with fraternities?

That was the scene last May when Regional Director Rodney L. Smart knocked on University of Minnesota student Fred Alonzi's door. Fred, and four of his friends, formed a colony in June, 1978. In September, the group moved into a 30 man house. By October 22, the five-man colony had grown to 20. How did they do it, when past attempts at re-chartering the Minnesota Alpha chapter ended in failure?

That question bothered me. As the new Regional Director, I wondered if it would be different this time. It had to work, because this colony occupied the unique position of having a house; financed both locally and through the Fraternity's National Housing Corporation.

The first attempt at colonizing began in March, 1975. Seven alumni, all from different chapters, ran advertisements in the school newspaper, which attracted six men to inquire and, and later pledge. But, according to Timothy J. Graff, Missouri-Rolla, '74, the Colony Counselor, the group found it could not compete without a house.

"At one time we had 25-35 men associated with us," Graff explained. "The promise of a house was always there, but we couldn't get things together. In December, 1977, there were three undergraduates left. We decided to 'throw in the towel.'"

The Alumni Board, however, would not let that happen. "They rallied to the cause," said Graff, "Most notably, Curtis L. Carlson, '37, (a member of the original Minnesota Alpha chapter)."

With a committed Alumni Board, local financing, a loan from the Fraternity's National Housing Corporation, and the resources of the Carlson Companies behind him, Chapter Development Director Kenneth S. Maddox went knocking on doors looking for housing leads. Tim Graff and Lawrence P. Goode, Rollins College, '72, followed up, looking at six different houses, and finally purchased a house from the Evans Scholars.

According to Graff, "It was through Mr. Carlson's enthusiasm, and the use of some of his resources, that we were able to buy a house." Without strong alumni support, such a purchase would have been impossible.

We now had a house for a non-existent colony. Regional Director Smart found the initial five men, and in September, they and Regional Director Woodbeck faced the excitement of filling the house with Sig Eps.

Once again, some alumni living in Minneapolis came through. Lyman Smith Colorado State, '74, laid the groundwork for the colony's first rush. The University of Minnesota runs a very structured formal rush, and Smith spent the time learning the rules and setting up a schedule.

Jeffrey R. Gatesmith, Arizona, '74, joined the effort, donating some of his time to actively participate in the rush functions. Gatesmith also took on the duties of the Brotherhood Development Coordinator after rush ended. A third alumnus, Steven Haeg, Michigan Tech, '77, also donated his time to participate in rush. Steve built a "Wheel of Fortune" for the colony's Casino Night rush function.

How could anyone not feel the excitement? Here we have five young colony members and five young alumni, hailing from chapters in Florida, Missouri, Colorado, Arizona, and Michigan; working together toward a Sig Ep chapter at Minnesota.

But hard work was the name of the game during rush week, and during the week preceding it. All of the rooms in the house needed paint, the carpets needed cleaning, and the basement floor needed scrubbing and waxing. Meanwhile, we needed to gear up for two full days of rush groups coming to the house for 30 minutes each, selling them on building a fraternity, and setting up two open houses and three rush parties. All of these events occurred within a five day time span.

At the end of that hectic week; after open houses, a Casino Night, a "Sig Ep Night at the Movies," and a bar-b-que, the colony had pledged 10 men. Considering that we competed with 20 other fraternities for the 80 men who went through formal rush, we were elated. Since that time, the colony has picked up five more, bringing the total manpower to 20.

What factors led to five men growing to 20 at such a fast pace? Number one is alumni support; from Tim Graff and Larry Goode, who have spent three years working toward a colony, and Curtis Carlson, who Graff says became almost a spiritual leader, to Lyman Smith, Jeff Gatesmith, and Steve Haeg, who all actively participated in rush, Brotherhood development, and financial operations.

The second factor is the original group of five: Fred Alonzi, Bruce Crum, Jim Bluhm, Bob Crim, and Ron Quanbeck. I found something about those five working together that made things happen... they provide a classic study in group dynamics!

Finally, everyone involved has something that he believes in, and wants to share; Sigma Phi Epsilon. Graff summed it up the best; "If it wasn't such a challenge, I wouldn't have stayed around."

Idaho Beta Chartered at Boise State University

Sigma Phi Epsilon was able to add to the listing of states in which active chapters reside, with the installation last April of the Idaho Beta Chapter at Boise State University. On April 22, 22 men were initiated into the newest national Fraternity on the B.S.U. campus.

Sig Ep teams from Oregon State University, University of Oregon, and Utah State University traveled many hundreds of miles to perform the initiation of our new brothers, and to join in the installation festivities, which included a welcoming reception on Friday, and a formal dinner dance on Saturday evening. Taking part in the chartering of the Fraternity's 255th chapter were Boise State University President Dr. Richard E. Bullington, National Director Carl O. Petersen, Grand President John W. Hartman, who lives in Boise, and Fred G. Long, District Governor of Eugene, Oregon.

Boise State University has grown from being a junior college, until 1965, to its status as a four year institution with an enrollment of 10,000 students, of whom 20 per cent reside on campus. Located in the state capital, the campus lies along the Boise river. The University offers a well-rounded course of study, including the fields of arts and sciences, business, education, health sciences, vocational-technical, and graduate studies.

Sigma Phi Epsilon joins a greek population on campus consisting of Kappa Sigma and Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternities, and Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Omicron Pi, Delta Delta Delta, and Gamma Phi Beta sororities.

The new chapter was originally formed as a colony in January 1977. As the group grew in size, so they did in recognition on campus, taking part in many campus activities, including sponsoring the March of Dimes Dance-a-thon, placing high in the intramural standings, and participation in Special Olympics for the handicapped.

Working with the colony members has been Chapter Counselor Gary Craner, a 1966 graduate of Utah State University, who is head athletic trainer and physical education instructor for B.S.U. Working with brother Craner have been Alumni Board members Joseph Scudder, Kansas, '52, Charles Gary Carroll, San Diego State, '72, and John W. Hartman.

Boston Scholarships Available Now!

An unrestricted scholarship fund for students of Boston University has been established and is making annual awards, according to Donald B. Hilton, Boston, '55, treasurer of the Massachusetts Gamma Alumni Corporation. Although the chapter has been dormant since 1970, scholarships are available for any Sigma Phi Epsilon brother attending the university, or for a son or daughter of a Sig Ep alumnus. If you would like additional information, contact the Financial Aid office, Boston University.

Northwood Institute Chapter Installed

On April 1, 1978, Sigma Phi Epsilon was chartered as the first national fraternity at Northwood Institute, Midland, Michigan, an institution dedicated to preparing young men and women for "immediate entry into productive, profitable life within a democratic private enterprise society," as stated by the institution's founders.

Northwood, founded in 1959, now consists of three campuses, with another in West Braden, Indiana, and in Cedar Hill, Texas. The Institute has an enrollment of nearly 1,000 men and 500 women and is fully accredited.

The Michigan Iota installation activities began with a reception for Sigma Phi Epsilon brothers from Michigan Theta, Lawrence Tech, and Michigan Beta, Western Michigan University, who served as initiating teams for the 28 charter members of the chapter. Taking part in the installation ceremonies were National Director Carl O. Petersen, District

The Michigan Iota Chapter grew from its founding in 1974 as the local fraternity Sigma Alpha and joins a Greek system of three local, social fraternities, two social sororities, three business fraternities, and one business sorority. Nearly 10% of the student population belongs to fraternities and sororities.

Reflections

Coming Home

We had lost, 13 to 10 in the final two minutes—one of those that hurt so much only because of the traditional rivalry. Even when leaving the stadium, I noticed the same placards, saddened faces, and arm-chair quarterbacks plotting strategy as if playing some form of vertical tic-tac-toe.

Thoughts turned from the game to the next point in our schedule. Old Bill Potter had seen me before the game and suggested that we join him for the post-game "show." Remembering that old Bill was quite adept at having a good time, I agreed.

We saw Bill and his wife Terry and headed across campus. Not paying attention to our direction, we soon found ourselves entering Fraternity Row. Me in Fraternity Row, I felt a certain dread surface, for what are we to do here? Why me? I hadn't even thought of the Fraternity for years. Well, it got worse, as Bill directed us in the front door, and there I was back in the fraternity house at 37.

Shock swept over me, as I turned my attention to locating Elmo, our friendly elk we had so proudly mounted on the wall as a prize from one of our "nights out." About me were years of faces, men whose names I had memorized as the old guard and young men who looked at me with a mixture of awe and peculiar question. Bill indicated that he yearly visited the Sig Ep house. No wonder, I thought, that explains his mentioning how strong the Fraternity was.

My thoughts and feelings were a mixture of fear and hope. Everything I had seen and heard of the Fraternity for the past five years was rather embarrassing—decreased size, abusive drugs, and no house rules or respect for others. What a contrast my days were as a Sig Ep. We were one of the best; the parties were grand, and the brothers were many of the sharpest men on campus. I continued to feel uneasy, but with Bill's insistence, we were soon in the living room, and then all "hell" broke loose.

From about me, the voices raised exclaiming:

"Bob, where have you been, it's been years!"

"Back to the Fraternity, eh?"

"You don't look any different since '63, except you seem to have lost some of your hair and added to your belly."

Each was correct, and within seconds the names came back—old Steve, the House Manager, boy, did we mess with him, and Bob, the Social Chairman, many a night we sat reviewing the prospects for this weekend's date.

Amidst this array of old faces came new ones, young ones introducing themselves and thanking me for visiting. I noticed no "hippie types," in fact, many looked like my son, now entering his senior year in high school. We talked shortly, and soon I found myself asking, "Son, are we still strong in intramurals? What about scholarship? Do you still raid the Chi Omegas across the street?" After three nods and one additional response, I realized that he and I were much the same, as he, too, grew up on a ranch and was now at home in the Fraternity.

Old stories abounded; faded memories were quickly revived. Soon there was talk of a golf game in Salem with Jay and Scott. Quickly the two hours passed, and we found ourselves leaving with Bill and Terry and heading back toward the car. While driving home, I realized that I had come home, as for three key years in college, the Fraternity was my home. Returning, I found many of the faces I recognized and many I didn't. We shared something that day, the fellowship of men and memories, and an awakening that today young men were continuing our tradition, for they were at home and enjoying it, too.

This fall, I'll be back, and maybe my son will be there welcoming me. My big brother will be there—I'd go just to see him. Most of all, I remember that there was a magic in the Fraternity when I was an undergraduate, and more importantly, it seems to be there, again.

people think. We think we do, but we really don't. We don't make nearly as many decisions as the people who are actually involved in the work. If you want to re-define that you may say, "Good managers don't make decisions," blows a lot of people's minds. We've got to understand that notion better.

Managers

I'm afraid there are many managers who should stand back and take a look at themselves. What they'd see is that they have an attitude that says "I'm better," "I'm smarter." Or they might feel "you're not as smart as I am." "You really don't want to work as hard as I do." "You're really not as good as I am."

People on top of the pyramid think they're better than everybody else. Of course, they say that they don't, but they really do. It really affects their mental approach toward themselves and their fellow human beings.

Organizations

The nature of the typical organization pyramid suggests that the higher you go up, the less room there is for people. And what about the people who "didn't make it?" It looks like we are stuck with "residual failures" at every step of the organization.

We can do better than that.

Responsibility

Many managers carry their responsibility heavily. The "buck stops here" kind of thing. Why shouldn't the "buck" stop with the person doing the piece work? Why shouldn't the responsibility monkey be on their backs? Why should it be on the bosses' back?

Power

People who enjoy the use of power today have striven most of their adult lives to gain those positions. They enjoy decision-making privileges.

What we're really saying is that the way to get commitment, involvement, and to become more productive, Mr. Manager, is a process of allowing your people some of the same enjoyment and privileges you have. And that means you have to give some of "yours" up.

That's a tough process. Some people just aren't willing to do it.

Capitalism

This whole effort regarding productivity is the essence of what, I think, our whole society is all about. Or look at it this way. It's really the most selfish thing you could do if you're objective is to maximize the results of the organization.

What the process calls for is giving up power and spreading it around. It seems a contradiction, but that's what it comes down to.

Education

I think some of our conditioning gets established very early. Parents

Fraternity's Treasurer Frank Ruck Featured As "A New American Manager"

By Ron Medved

EDITOR'S NOTE—This article was the second in a series of three on productivity, which appeared in IN-SIGHTS, and reported on some of the latest changes in thinking about how Americans organize work. INSIGHTS is a publication of the Pacific Institute, Seattle, Washington. Reprinted with permission.

Frank J. Ruck, Jr., (Michigan, '46), vice president of Chicago Title & Trust, understands the game of managing for productivity. As chairman of the standing committee on productivity for the Lincoln National Corporation, Frank Ruck has invested 18 months of study and planning in order to introduce management strategies for enhancing productivity with the Lincoln family of companies. Even though the implementation has only recently begun, Frank is quick to report that he hasn't been as excited in years. (Ruck is currently the Fraternity's Grand Treasurer, and was a member of the Headquarters staff from 1946-1956).

Ruck

What excites Frank is what productivity people call the "double payoff." Making changes in how we organize for work not only can enhance productivity, but people can be happier as well. Admittedly, there is a direct connection between an individual's (or organization's) improving productivity and their sense of fulfillment and achievement. However, from a psychological point of view, often the atmosphere for fulfillment and achievement must be created first . . . then the productivity improvements can follow.

Managing for productivity begins and ends with the management of attitudes. In order to create an atmosphere conducive to enhance productivity, an organization needs to examine continually its own preconceived ideas about itself. It must probe and question. And question some more. The end result is that everything involved in the workplace is constantly subject to examination for its relevancy. The "double payoff" is worth that kind of effort.

Recently this writer had the opportunity to dine with Frank Ruck, Jr. at a place called Hy's of Canada in downtown Chicago. While the dinner dishes were being carried away, the conversation turned predictably to Frank's favorite subject. The following commentary is a slice of the probing, questioning style of what we call "A New American Manager."

Productivity

What is productivity? It's very simple stuff really. The economic view is that we're examining the ratio of output to input. How do we get more out of a given amount of resource? Whenever we talk about productivity, implicit is the notion that we are talking about enhancing or improving it. In a simple minded way, we're talking about change, with big capital letters, CHANGE!

Decision Making

There really isn't as much decision making going on at the top as most

Annual Report

Grand Treasurer's Report

By Frank J. Ruck, Jr.

The year just ended was continuing encouragement to the National Board of Directors and me that our fiscal operations are sound. It is important to be alert to the needs of the future, as our expanded programming, our commitment to a career-oriented professional Headquarters Staff, and our commitments to service in the field place more demands on our budget, both through its scope and the effects of inflation.

I am confident that we can meet our future needs. To do this, we need (1) increased annual support to the Living Endowment through the Educational Foundation, (2) more volunteer alumni assistance in the field, and (3) some increases along the way in undergraduate fees.

This review is based on the June 30, 1978 financial statements, Audited by A.M. Pullen and Company.

Sig-Ep Joins Phi Alpha Delta Pre-Law Assistance Program

Sigma Phi Epsilon has joined forces with a national legal fraternity, Phi Alpha Delta, to make available to our local chapters a variety of law-related resources, from advice on preparing to enter law school, to speakers on legal considerations.

Phi Alpha Delta is a professional fraternity, open to membership for law students on 155 campuses. It also consists of alumni chapters in 75 cities across the country. One of Phi Alpha Delta's international officers is J. Steven Clark, the recently elected Attorney General for the state of Arkansas, who is a 1968 graduate of the Sig Ep chapter at Arkansas State University.

The career assistance program was originated through the efforts of James A. Borchers, Executive Secretary of Phi Alpha Delta, who is a 1973 graduate of the Sig Ep chapter at Valparaiso University in Indiana, and Alumni Affairs Director William L. Hoke, Jr. of the Headquarters staff. Borchers, who travels for Phi Alpha Delta assisting its local chapters, presented the plan to the Phi Alpha Delta Board of Directors during the fraternity's convention in August, at which time the Board heartily endorsed it.

Borchers said, "I see the joint program as one in which members of our law school chapters make themselves available to speak with Sigma Phi Epsilon undergraduate and alumni chapters about various aspects of the law." He added, "I especially see this program as helpful for the Sig Ep approaching his senior year, wondering whether in fact he should attempt to go to law school, and various questions Borchers surrounding that decision. A first hand account of law school curriculums from a law student could be very helpful."

The plan has been introduced this fall to Sigma Phi Epsilon's undergraduate chapters. "The success of the new program will be determined by whether or not the Sig Ep chapters will take advantage of this free resource, available right on their own campuses or in their communities," said Hoke, adding, "Chapters Counselors, and Chapter Alumni Advisors should be sure to call attention to this resource as well."

If you would like information on the career assistance program, or on Phi Alpha Delta, contact Sigma Phi Epsilon headquarters, or Phi Alpha Delta headquarters, at 10722 White Oak Ave., Granada Hills, California 91344.

Kolanek Named District Governor for Michigan

James Robert Kolanek, Lawrence Institute of Technology (Michigan Theta), 1973, has a "tough act to follow," as he has accepted the position of District Governor for the state of Michigan. Brother Kolanek's "tough act to follow" is retiring District Governor David Scott, who served in that position for two years. District 10 encompasses eight undergraduate chapters and a colony at Michigan State University (reactivation of the Michigan Epsilon Chapter).

While an undergraduate at Lawrence Tech, Jim held the positions of Corresponding Secretary and Junior and Senior Marshall for Sigma Phi Epsilon, as well as serving in the college positions of Newspaper Photographic Editor, Publications Business Manager, Yearbook Editor-in-Chief, and Student Body President.

Since graduation, Brother Kolanek has served as Alumni Association Vice President and President for the Michigan Theta Chapter. Now, as District Governor, Jim will be a volunteer manager of District 10, working with Chapter Counselors and Alumni Board members to assist the undergraduate chapters in their operations.

The District Governor is responsible for knowing the condition of each undergraduate chapter in his District and developing support for chapters not operating at a satisfactory level, as well as maintaining and improving the level of operations in the chapter. He also works with the District Alumni Advisor (in Michigan that is David L. Dalenberg, Michigan State University), who is an advisor for alumni programs and activities within the District.

Brother Kolanek is currently a Product Development Chemist for Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corporation in Ferndale.

Upon his appointment, Jim expressed his feelings about fraternalism as follows, "A fraternity offers a member the opportunity of personal growth and to develop skills and talents that college classes alone would never be able to give them. The more effort a person puts into the fraternity, the more he gets from it in return. I graduated from college in 1973, and it seems that I continue to get more from my work with the Fraternity than I put in. The people in the Fraternity are important to me, however, I believe that even more important are the ideals that the Fraternity represents. I believe that the greatest thing an alumnus can give to the Fraternity is his time and talents." The National Board of Directors is confident that Jim will supply the necessary time and talents for working with the chapters in the state of Michigan, District 10.

Middle Tennessee State Sig Eps Greet Sorority Pledges

By Phil Barnes, Jr., President

The 1978 Fall Pledge Tea was another success at the home of our own Sig Ep, Melvin Scarlett, who is the President at M.T.S.U. There are five sororities on the Middle Tennessee campus. It was a great chance for our 15 pledges to be the first ones to meet each sorority pledge. Our chapter counselor, Dr. Jim Wiseman and his wife were also on hand.

Each sorority girl was given a dark red rose with their sorority colors on it. Six of our little sisters served as hostesses and did a splendid job! Through the tea, each sorority has planned a mixer with us so we can get more involved with each other. Alpha Delta Pi has accepted an invitation to do a "Homecoming Float" with us. We feel like the tea has helped out in planning activities with each sorority.

After the last sorority left, we placed a badge on Mrs. Scarlett because of all of her help in making our pledge tea possible. This has become a big tradition on this campus and all the sororities look forward to it. In fact, some of the actives of each sorority still come back to it! Just think, the Sig Eps met over 100 girls who will remember us and the tea throughout their college career.

Benefits Expanded on Alumni Insurance Program

Participation in our membership Group Hospital Indemnity Plan has been excellent — so good, in fact, that the underwriting insurance company has increased the maximum amount to all Sig Ep brothers.

The Group Hospital Indemnity Plan now offers benefits up to $700 per week ($100 per day) to brothers of all ages, for each day you are hospitalized; and for alumni under 65, benefits would be doubled to $1400 per week ($200 per day) if hospitalized for cancer or confined in an intensive care unit.

Because of this change, you may now select coverage amounts in increments of $20 per day, up to the new $100 per day limit. Identical coverage can be selected for spouses, provided that the individual is participating in the program.

Because of the ever increasing costs of hospitalization, the program has continually proven to be well received by alumni — particularly because the cash benefits are paid directly to you regardless of any other coverage you may have.

Brothers age 65 and over may select either the Hospital Indemnity Plan, or the optional Medicare Supplement Program, or select both. Under the Medicare Supplement section, benefits are designed to compliment those provided by Social Security Medicare and will provide payment for many of the in-hospital charges federally sponsored Medicare does not cover. The plan also has a nursing home provision that will help pay the nursing home deductible under Medicare.

The Fraternity's Group Hospital Indemnity Plan has been designed to allow all members, regardless of age and health, to enroll. For enrollment information, just write to the Headquarters, or call 1-800-424-9808 and we'll send you a brochure and complete enrollment details.

Mrs. Betty MacDonough Remembered By Sig Eps

One of Sigma Phi Epsilon's most loyal ladies, Mrs. Betty MacDonough, wife of former Grand President William A. "Mac" MacDonough, died September 20 as a result of an automobile accident in Clemson, South Carolina.

Betty MacDonough's relationship with Sigma Phi Epsilon went back more than 50 years, when she and Brother "Mac" met at Washington and Lee University, his alma mater, and were later married in Washington in 1931. As the MacDonoughs moved throughout the years, both became involved with the Fraternity at each stop; in New York City with the New York Gamma (New York University) Chapter, the Illinois Alpha (University of Illinois) Chapter in 1934-1945, the Michigan Alpha Chapter at the University of Michigan from 1936-1939, and again, in New York City in the late 1950s and early '60s, when Mac served as President of the New York City Alumni Chapter.

Betty MacDonough, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority, started attending the Fraternity's Grand Chapter Conclaves in 1932 at Chattanooga, Tennessee and participated in more than 10 others throughout the years. She was also a frequent guest at Regional Leadership Academies since their inception in 1965. Betty was close not only to many of the Fraternity's alumni leaders during the past 30 years, but to their wives as well. She made many close friendships.

During Brother MacDonough's years on the National Board of Directors and Grand Presidency in 1973-1975, Betty joined him on numerous chapter visits throughout the nation and at the formal installations of more than 12 new chapters. Among them was the South Carolina Beta Chapter at Clemson University, which Mac was instrumental in starting after the MacDonoughs had made Clemson, South Carolina their retirement home in 1966.

Betty's Sig Ep spirit was evident through the support which she and her husband provided to the Fraternity's Educational Foundation, especially the David Dunlap Memorial Fund at Virginia Epsilon, which Mac helped begin and which now provides two annual scholarships, and the U.G. Dubach Fund at Oregon State University, Oregon Alpha Chapter. Betty was also active in her community, serving on the Council on Human Relations as Ways and Means Chairman, in her church, and in a local orphanage. She was also one of the first workers at the Clemson Day Care Center.

In her sorority, Betty MacDonough was a charter member and served as President of the Kappa Alpha House Corporation Board at Clemson, the Delta Phi Chapter. She was also Chairman of the Alumni Scholarships. In her memory, the Betty MacDonough Memorial Scholarship Fund for Kappa Alpha Theta has been established, and gifts may be sent to the Fund at P.O. Box 5454, Clemson University, Clemson, South Carolina 29632. Or memorials may be sent to the Sigma Phi Epsilon Educational Foundation, P.O. Box 1901, Richmond, Virginia 23215.

A memorial service was held September 24 and was attended by Sigma Phi Epsilon brothers from the South Carolina Beta Chapter and the Georgia Delta Chapter, University of Georgia, a Sig Ep chapter the MacDonoughs have been close to in recent years. Last year, Georgia Delta dedicated the William A. MacDonough Library as a part of the chapter house.

Jean T. Fisher, Kansas, '46, displays the Dr. James Naismith Peachbasket Award with the aid of Kansas Senator Robert Dole, a Kappa Sigma from Kansas University. The award is presented in Kansas City annually to an outstanding figure in basketball. The award, in honor of the inventor of the sport who was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon at Kansas University, was presented last year to Arnold "Red" Auerbach of the Boston Celtics. This year's winner is the University of Kentucky head coach Joe B. Hall. Fisher is the Peachbasket Committee's President.

A Report— Student Leaders and Career Success

By Tim Singleton, Ph.D.

Have you wondered why some students successfully strive for academic excellence, and for positions of leadership in student organizations? Why professional and graduate schools and employers are more interested in admitting or employing college student leaders than non-leaders? Have you heard people say that leadership is a vague set of characteristics which individuals are born with, and that these traits can be neither described, learned, nor taught?

These and other related questions occurred to me often in my work over a period of ten years, as Dean of Men at Georgia State University. During that time, my office advised, assisted, counseled, and directed more than fifteen hundred student leaders in over one hundred student organizations of all types and description. As I observed the emergence and development of student leaders, it became clear to me that, with regard to effectiveness, student leaders fell into three categories. Student leaders were either (1) very effective, (2) average effective, or (3) ineffective. Often those who took their leadership positions with enthusiasm and support failed, and many who had apparent unproven credentials for effectiveness succeeded with flying colors.

Student Personnel professionals (Deans of Students and their colleagues) take great pride, and justifiably so, in their success in helping to create an environment on the college campus which encourages student leadership development. The role of student personnel people has shifted from that of disciplinarian and rule enforcer to one of student development, and much of their intrinsic reward structure is the satisfaction of being influential in providing facilitative guidance in the leadership development students. This role is viewed as a significant part of the educational process. Student personnel people fill a significant educational role in their leadership developmental activities.

During the past few years there appears to be a movement of students to seek organized relationships and to enjoy the leadership responsibilities and opportunities which are necessary for organized activity. Increasing numbers of recognized organizations on campus, including fraternities, sororities, honorary societies, and student union and student government programs attest to the heightened desire on the part of students to be engaged in constructive, meaningful, and enjoyable activities with their fellow students. In particular, all social fraternities and sororities encourage and depend upon the development of effective and successful leadership.

Research studies have shown that holding positions of leadership in college is a positive selection criteria for employing organizations. There is further evidence of later success in organizations for individuals who held student leadership positions while in college. A number of studies indicate that successful performance in organizations, as measured by salary and position level, is closely related to leadership in campus organizations and activities. The data from the rather extensive AT & T studies indicate the joint action of strong academic performance along with campus organizational leadership activities in predicting career success, as measured by salary level (Campbell et al 1970). High achieving students who participated more actively in campus organizations were more likely to earn high salaries at AT & T than low achieving students who were relatively inactive in campus organizations (Bray 1962). In an interesting study of Stanford University MBA graduates it was found that current salary was significantly correlated to leadership in campus activities while these people were undergraduate students (William & Harrell 1964).

These studies and others indicate that people who are rated high in overall career success are more likely to have backgrounds that suggest a kind of "life-style" of success, including scholastic and organizational leadership in college, and the assumption of important responsibilities early in life. (Campbell et al 1970).

CHARACTERISTICS OF
CAMPUS LEADERS

What are the characteristics of successful campus leaders? It is the position of this writer that the important characteristics that enable campus leaders to be effective are definable, measurable, and that receptive individuals can improve their leadership skills through training and practice. Leadership positions in campus organizations provide students with an extraordinary opportunity to develop their managerial leadership philosophy and skills, and, most important, confidence in their ability to lead others. The effective leader is more likely to be strong in six basic leadership characteristics than the non-leader. These characteristics are (Miner 1965):

1. Respect for Authority—Effective leaders have basic trust for people in authority positions. An important aspect of this leadership characteristic is respect for and an accurate perception of one's own authority and the willingness to accept responsibility and to utilize that authority. Strong and effective leaders utilize their authority. While weak and ineffective leaders are suspicious of the authority of others and themselves.
2. Competitiveness—Effective leaders are competitive people. In order to have an opportunity to lead, one must be selected by a group of people by election or through appointment by a person or group who have the authority to do so. In either case, some comparison between people with regard to their ability, performance, and/or potential is made. Effective leaders welcome competitive comparison with others because their confidence with regard to the skills and abilities that he or she possesses.
3. Assertiveness—Effective leaders are assertive. They have confidence in themselves and their abilities. They are willing to assert themselves and their positions on controversial matters and on matters in which they have strong beliefs.
4. Desire for Power—Effective leaders feel confident in their ability to lead, and they feel good when they have the opportunity to impose their wishes on other people.
5. Standing out from the Group—Effective leaders have the strength of self confidence which enables them to make decisions or take stands which they feel are for the long-run benefit of the group which they lead even though their action may be unpopular in the short-run. They have confidence in their ability to make decisions that they believe to be in the long-run best interest of their organizations.
6. Responsibility—Effective leaders attend to the routine responsibilities of their leadership positions. They are diligent in the day-to-day administrative details such as promptly responding to inquiries, written and oral communications, attending important meetings, and other routine activities which are an integral part of their leadership position.

This list of characteristics form an important part of the personality traits of effective leaders. A test of these leadership characteristics has been developed and utilized over a period of fifteen years to measure the extent of these traits among college students, business managers, salespeople, educational administrators, college professors, and research and development professionals. The test, called the Miner Sentence Completion Scale (MSCS) (Miner 1961), has shown to be a valid predictor of leadership/managerial success in many organizations and particularly in large, structured organizations. (Miner 1965).

My research, utilizing the MSCS, among campus student leaders and non-leaders yielded some interesting results (Singleton 1976). The study, conducted in 1975, included one-hundred sixteen campus leaders and seventy-four non-leaders at Georgia State University. The student leaders in the study were selected or appointed to positions of authority in campus organizations. Many held leadership positions in more than one organization. The positions which they held varied greatly and included, among others, the student government president, other student government officers, fraternity and sorority officers, honorary organization presidents, and chairpersons of committees ranging in size from three people to twenty. The non-leaders in this study were similar to the student leaders, except for the fact that they did not hold campus leadership positions.

The MSCS test results indicate that the student leaders were stronger than the non-leaders in the characteristics attributable to effective leaders that were discussed earlier. This was particularly true with regard to competitiveness, desire for power, and standing out from the group.

We know that social fraternities and sororities encourage the development of individual strengths and abilities. Particularly, the opportunity for the development of leadership abilities is stressed as a benefit or organizational membership and is a necessary for the survival and strength of all kinds of organizations. Effective leadership is desirable for the success of college student organizations, and those who have the opportunity to be in leadership positions in college have an advantage over non-leaders in terms of admission into graduate and professional schools as well as future career success.

‘Bringing Brothers Together’

Area Contact Program
Getting off the Ground!

Sigma Phi Epsilon’s new area contact program . . . how is it used, and what is it for? Simply, it consists of the listing (at left) of Sigma Phi Epsilon alumni who have agreed to “volunteer” to be available for other alumni in their areas to contact. The way it’s used is really up to you! It’s a way to meet new people in your area . . . to find out about the area schools, real estate, social activities, etc. . . . It’s a way to join with other Sig Ep alumni in forming an alumni organization . . . It’s a way to get involved with a college or university in your area . . . It’s got many possibilities!

Right now we list the names and addresses of 71 alumni who are Area Contact Brothers, and the list is growing each day. To become an Area Contact Brother, check the appropriate box on the address change form on the back cover of the Journal, and return it to Headquarters. We will confirm it to you upon receipt of the form. We’re looking forward to hearing from you!

START A SIG EP
ALUMNI CHAPTER!

Alumni Chapters are comprised of Sig Ep alumni from different undergraduate chapters living in a major geographic area. The alumni organization meets, conducts programs, and supports nearby Sig Ep undergraduate chapters through such activities as career counseling, rush support, and fund-raising. Alumni Chapters are chartered units of the Fraternity, and each active chapter has a vote at Grand Chapter Conclaves.

exercising too much power. Educational institutions.

Just look at the “teacher,” for instance. The “teacher” always views himself as a superior being. That’s a notion we have to CHANGE.

To be thoroughly involved in the learning process means to act in the role of a “facilitator.” Aiding discovery. Too many “teachers” are interested in telling how much they know about a subject. Regurgitating what they already know.

And by the way, you can substitute the word “manager” for teacher (above). Or you can substitute “parent.” It’s all the same.

Retirement

Why should people retire at 65? Who ever had that idea? As a matter of fact, I just found out last week that legacy about retiring at 65 came from Otto Bismark in Germany in 1889. And you know how he picked it? That’s right. He picked it right out of the thin air.

That notion has come down for decades and we’re just now attacking it for the nonsense that it is.

The Younger Generation

The very presence of the younger generation in the work force is forcing us in the direction of CHANGE. And the generation after that are literally being raised better than us—a large number of them. The Parent Effectiveness Training movement is one physical manifestation of it.

So what’s going to happen when all these young people come into the work force? It’s just going to have to be different or there will be a revolt.

But I’m optimistic. The gradual process of CHANGE will work. Not only can we be super productive, but people can be happier too. We call it the double payoff. And I believe in it!

Achieving Your Potential

What is AYP all about? It’s making us understand CHANGE as it impacts on people. You can’t enhance anything if you don’t CHANGE it and enhancing productivity involves people. We need to understand what makes us tick and what makes the people around us tick. When I first saw an AYP video tape I said, “That’s it”. “That’s going to help people understand CHANGE.

Not too long ago, Frank Ruck was assigned a change in jobs as he moved up to become head of five of Chicago Title’s subsidiary companies. As if that’s not enough, Frank is a part owner in nine restaurant operations (primarily in Colorado). He is a competitive sailor and commodore of the Burnham Park Yacht Club on Lake Michigan. In addition, somewhere, he finds time to teach economics and accounting classes one night a week at Aurora College in Chicago.

Interestingly, it’s the teaching part of Frank Ruck that his associates like to talk about. In a nutshell, the word is out that Frank Ruck, Jr. is a “full-time teacher masquerading as a business man.” That usually gets a chuckle from those who know Frank.
